

I think the FCC should not preempt state Telephone Privacy laws by adopting one with lower standards. We have been on the Indiana Telephone Privacy list since its beginning and appreciate very much the reduction in telemarketing calls as a result of being on that list. I rarely get any telemarketing calls today compared to at least 4 or 5 a week before I signed up for the Indiana list. I prefer to call the businesses I want to work with rather than having them contact me about new services or products. I am concerned that with a Federal list, the number of telemarketing calls I receive would again reach an unacceptable level.
